CIDER WITH ROSIE

by Laurie Lee

Adapted by James Roose-Evans

A delightful stage adaptation of Laurie Lee's bestselling book about his childhood in a small Cotswold village in the early 20th century. Adapted by James Roose-Evans, the play tells of Laurie's schooldays and neighbours and his wonderful eccentric mother and her extended family. The rich variety of village characters are brought vividly to life in a vanished rural world of village schools and church outings which also touches on the darker side of village life. The play catches the mood of Laurie Lee's masterpiece perfectly and will appeal to anyone who loves theatre.

The climax of the show is a fully-improvised musical tale based on audience suggestions that is guaranteed to bring the house down.

THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR

First published in 1602, William Shakespeare's epic and delightful comedy is a rollicking tale of marriage, fidelity, trickery and love.

The puffed up and degenerate Sir John Falstaff, a Knight of the Garter, is seized with the outrageous idea that to seduce two of Windsor's wealthy merry wives will prove his virility and give him access to their money. The assignments are made, but with female cunning and a devilish plot involving their husbands, Falstaff is repeatedly tricked by the women. He is hidden in a laundry basket full of dirty washing and thrown into the Thames. He is further duped and terrified in the eery moonlit shadows of a blasted oak in Windsor Great Park to which he is lured by a band of ruthless townsfolk seeking to revel in the old man's misery.

Anyone who saw Creative Cow's visit to the Regal in May, with Charlie's Aunt, will be putting this date in their diaries.

THE SPICE OF LIFE

By Fred Owen

A musical entertainment for all the family. Pantalone the miserly Venetian spice merchant, concerned that he is being cheated by his agent in the Moluccas, decides to pay him a surprise visit. However, having sent Pedrolino his servant to book passage to the East Indies, he has not taken into consideration the boy's inability to tell left from right and so finds himself and his entourage languishing in the West Indies, on the island of St. Vitus and waiting for the right wind.

The island of St. Vitus is governed by Doctor Balanzoni whose ward Maria has fallen madly in love with Pantalone's clerk Fernando Montoya. Fernando wishes to stay on the island and marry Maria, but Pantalone insists he works out a years notice as part of his contract of employment. Maria's guardian is also unhappy with the romance after Fernando has been lured away to the island of Tortuga for a drunken binge with Captain Andrea Spavento and the crew of The Golden Fruit Bat. And so it falls, as usual, to Pantalone's maid Columbina to come up with a plan, involving pirates and love potions, to save the day.
